Wherever the City Fathers went they became convinced that the city's money was well spent, and they rather thought that in most instances the appropriations should be increased, if the finances of the city should justify such action.

first institution visited was the Eye, Ear, and Throat Hospital, on Gover-ner street. It was thoroughly inspected and found to be in good condition. The next stop was made at the Medical Col-lege, on College street, where a rather lege, on College street, where a rather lengthy stay was made. Although tired and worn out from their inspection, which involved a seed deal of walking and climbing of stairs, they carried out the request of Mrs. Gill and followed her through the whole building, viewing the reception-room, the dormitories, sick-room, dressing-room, etc. They were finally invited into the dining-room, where a splendid supper awaited them. At the close of the repast the committee returned to the reception-room, where soon after the orphan boys appeared before them in orphan boys appeared before them in single file to the tune of a march played by Mrs. Gill on the organ. They gave an impromptu entertainment by singing several hymns and songs, rendering recitations, etc. The committee were greatly pleased with what they had seen and heard and felt convinced that the sum of 1800 appropriated annually by the city was well spent. In consideration of this amount seven boys are kept at the institution, which are sent there by the city authorities.

DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION. Old Dominion Chapter Celebrates the Battie of Guilford Court-House.

Old Dominion Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held a largely attended meeting yesterday afternoon at the Virginia Historical Society building, who attended the recent National Congress n Washington city.

The day being the one hundred and thirth anniversary of the battle of Gull-the event was appropriately celeford, the event was appropriately cele-brated by the reading of a memorial of that conflict, which the distinguished North Carolina historian, David L. Schenck, says "was second to no battle in the Revolutionary war-a supreme mo-ment in the life of Cornwallis and the crisis in the revolution. This victory won, there was no for to obstruct his passage into the defenceless province of Virginia. North Carolina would be at the mercy North Carolina would be at the mercy of the crown. * * Cornwallis could take rode unchallenged in the harbors of Nor-folk and New York. The visions of glory vanished. The fatal wound to royal inchority, from which it lingered and ingering died at Yorktown on the 19th day of October, 1784, was given at Guil-ford Courthouse on the 15th day of March, whose grandfathers participated in this battle-Mrs. Hunter McGuire, descendant of Major Alexander Stuart, whose sword of Major used at that time is now in possession of the Virginia Historical Scotety; Mrs. Decatur Axtell, descendant of Ass Harrell, and Mrs. Theodore Whitfield, descendant of John Morehead.

The paper read by Miss M. M. P. Newton, upon the second era of Virginia-namely, from the arrival of Alexander Sjotswood in the harbor now called Hampton Reads, 1710, to the close of his career in 1723, elicited much applause, and the request that it be published in the American Monthly was made. The next paper of this series will be "Cornwallis" paper of this series will be "Corn-in Virginia," by Miss N. B. Winston

Mr. Schoolfield Commends the Course of the Times_Crowded Churches.

The interest in the several revival meetings in Richmond is unabated, and the churches are crowded at every service. Evangelist Schoolfield closed his remarkable series of meetings at Trinity Methodist church last evening with one of the most earnest appeals to the sinner to turn from the error of his way that has ever been heard in this city, and many were moved to a determination to lead a better life.

His discourse at the morning service was also a forcible exposition of the was also a forcible exposition of the Word. His subject was "Sin and its Consequences."

He first touched upon personal sins and after words of warning to his hearers in regard to the evils to which mankind are prone, he took up national sins, and showed how the whole country had sufshowed how the whole country had suffered him the whole country him the whole country had suffered him the whole country him the whole cou regard to the evils to which mankind are prope, he took up national sins, and showed how the whole country had suffered, and was still suffering, from such sins as the legalized liquor traffic and the reduction of the blacks to slavery. Among the worst of these sins he mentioned election frauds. "I wish," said the Evangelist, earnestly and impressively, "that every young man in the city of Richmond was within the sound of my voice this morning that I might warn them against these evils. They corrupt the natures of men and sap the very foundation of government. All honor to that paper which has had the courage and manliness to come forth and take a stand against this evil, regardless of consequences." This reference, which was recognized by all as intended for The Times, was said carnestly and impressively.

"Trinity church, like it has been each night since he has been here, was crowded to the doors last night.

He took as his subject the "Deliverance of the Children of Israel from the Land of Egypt." He briefly but graphically outlined this well-known Bible story, and drew from it the symbolical lessons contained therein. He presented the bondage of the Israelites as symbolical of sin and their release from Pharoah as a regeneration. "Go Forward" were the two words which composed his text, taken from the command given to Moses in the Rook of Exodus. He held out this inspiring sentence as the watch-word of Christian workers, and showed that the revards in every kind of line are gained by cross-hearing in the particular line being pursued, whether political, commercial, scientific, or religious.

That with conversion the Christian life had just reached its beginning, and the work of the soul's salvation must be worked out by the means of grace offered and the elevation of the spirit.

He presented foreibly the fact that religious life must be full of activity. There can be no standing still for the Christian; he must go backward or he must go forward.

"Christ the Deliverer" was Mr. Needham's theme at Park-Place church last evening. An immense congregation filled the sanctuary, and many were turned from the doors. Rev. Drs. Landrum, Cooper, Fair, Stewart, Rev. A. R. Moore. Rev. R. T. Wilson, and other ministers were present. Mr. Needham referred to the remarkable interest being shown in the meetings going on in the various parts of the city, which he looks on as indicative of a grand outpouring of the holy spirit in Riehmond.

Mr. Needham continues to preach at the Second Presbyterian church in the afternoon and at Park Place at night.

Mr. Biliss.

Mr. Bliss.

Evangelist Bliss had another large and attentive audience at Leigh-Street last night. The services will close at that church to-night, and Saturday Messrs. Bliss and Jacobs will commence a meeting at Old Market Hall, which will continue each night next week. NEW YORK, March 15.—It was rather a dull day at the Stock Exchange. At the opening ifte market was weakened by lower cables from London for American securities. The foreigners sold about as much as they rought on yesterday, because they feared that the Bland seigniorage bill would pass the Senate. At least this was the reason assigned by some of the foreign houses here. When the Arbitrage houses ceased selling the market drifted into duliness. Later on there was some good buying of Chicago Gas, Sugar, Missouri Pacific, and Whisky, and a rise of § to 1½ per cent. ensued. Another dull spell followed this rise, and local operators began to liseuss the chances of the Bland bill receiving the President's signature. Most people on the street believe that the President will veto it. DAILY COTTON LETTER.

Following is the daily cotton letter of Atwood, Violett & Co. of New York, by private wire to C. W. Branch & Co.:

According to the New York Chronicle the world's visible supply September I. 1893, was 2,653,000 bales, price of middlings at Liverpool, 44; on September I. 1892, 3,540 bales, middling, 44; on September I. 1881, 2,265,000 bales, middling, 6; on September I. 1880, 1,433,000 bales, middling, 6; on September I. 1880, 1,431,000 bales, middling, 6; on September I. 1889, 1890,000 bales, middling, 5 7-16. The estimated total supply of the world for 1893-94 is 13,313,000 bales, middling, 5 7-16. The estimated total supply of the world for 1893-94 is 13,313,000 bales, weekly, or 4,160,000 bales; Continental Europe at rate of 80,000 bales weekly, or 4,160,000 bales; Continental Europe at rate of 80,000 bales weekly, or 4,160,000 bales; Continental Europe at rate of 80,000 bales weekly, or 4,160,000 bales; Continental Europe at rate of 80,000 bales weekly, or 4,160,000 bales; Continental Europe at rate of 80,000 bales, which will be the smallest supply on that date, with but two exceptions, according to the above table, in eight years. The price of middling at Liverpool to-day is 49. We see from the foregoing figures how evident it is that production of cotton is falling behind consumption. As prices realized by planters this season have not been high, to put it middly, the acrease, instead of being increased, we think more likely to be decreased. Anyhow we save reasons in our letter of yesterday showing how suicidal it would be for the South to increase its cotton area next season, and, interentially, what an extreme advance we might have if the South does not increase or decrease its area. We have thought when the cotton world becomes aware of the probable supply at the beginning of another season on September 1st next, that a rise in price from the present low figures would seem to be most probable, to say the least. The market to-day instead of which an improvement of two sixty-fourths polints was realized colonial costume. The women indulged in bewitching smiles peculiarly becoming to rosy cheeks and dainty lips, and sustained their reputation as worthy representatives of our great-grandmothers, who "never kissed a man" until months after the marriage ceremony. The mendled justice to their parts in every respect. They looked wise, now and then assumed a diplomatic air, and did not forget to do the role of a Chesterfield. It was a pretty picture. Smiling faces, soft voices, handsome gowns, dreamy lights, and lovely flowers, all blended into a bewitching scene that appealed to the aesthetic side of one's nature. There was George Washington, whose early propensity for disfiguring a cherry-tree was assumine as his inability to ite out of the dilemma. There was Mrs. Washington, a worthy representative of the house of Washington, James Madison looked every inch a statesman, while Dolly Madison, with a will of her own, sustained her reputation as a belle. John Randolph, with scanty physique; Thomas, Jefferson, the independence man; Patrick Henry, crying for "Liberty or Death"; Alexander Hamilton, the born financier; Henjamin Franklin, who unlocked the mysteries of electricity with a key; Lord Cornwallis, weeping over his proximity with York-town, and other statesmen, soldiers, and diplomats, together with their respective wives, did the honors of the evening in a highly creditable manner.

The following were the personnel of the Reception Committee; George Washington, Mrs. A. J.
